IS IT TIME TO BUY A NEW LAPTOP COMPUTER?

Nothing lasts forever, including your laptop. Most laptops function for an average of three years. Some of the more expensive models can last up to five years. In addition to your laptops age, it may need replaced if it begins doing the following:

- It's running slowly, lagging, and freezing. Takes a long time to boot up and power down.
- You have to force restart on a regular basis. This is not good at all.
- It randomly shuts down on you in the middle of a task. The fan can give out or the system can't handle the tasks.
- You get the "Blue Screen of Death". This indicates a problem with your laptop's operating system.
- There are incredibly long pauses between applications or from one tab to another.
- It cannot accept software updates. This is probably the most important reason to buy a new laptop. Without the latest software updates, you are left more vulnerable to hackers, viruses, and malware.

Remember, it's better to plan ahead and back up your important information regularly to the cloud or to a device that will transfer your data to your new laptop when you have to purchase one.
